

THE RAILWAY IS BLAMED

North-Western Road Responsible for Death of Jacob Kolf.

GUILTY OF NEGLIGENCE.

Daughter Tells Coroner's Jury the Story of Her Father's Terrible Death.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 17. [Special.]—The Chicago & North-Western Railroad company was found guilty of negligence yesterday afternoon by a coroner's jury impaneled to inquire into the manner and cause of death in the case of Jacob Kolf, who was killed by the cars last week at the Wisconsin avenue crossing of the North-Western tracks in this city. The jury found that the railroad company was guilty of negligence because it did not maintain a flagman at this crossing, especially since the testimony tended to prove that the cars, which killed Mr. Kolf, were "backed" across the street in what is termed a flying switch.

Miss Barbara Kolf, a daughter of the deceased, was a witness at the inquest. She told in broken accents the story of her father's terrible death, of which she was a witness. She said her father seemed to be pushed along the track for a short distance at a rate faster than the old man could keep up and in a moment he was thrown to the ground and crushed to death under the wheels. His head was taken off in the horrible disaster's presence. Miss Kolf broke down completely and for a few minutes could not proceed. Presently she calmed herself and said that when she realized that her father was killed she looked at the top of the car and saw a brakeman at the brake. She screamed and exclaimed in anguish: "Oh, my God, you have killed my father." Miss Kolf was not subjected to a rigid examination owing to her nervous condition. It is probable, however, that the matter will not be dropped by the relatives of the deceased.

MAKE OVERALLS.

Average of 1000 Pairs a Day Turned Out at Green Bay Reformatory.

Green Bay, Wis., July 17. [Special.]—An average of 1000 pairs of overalls are being manufactured daily at the reformatory in this city. The contractors for whom the garments are made have an agent in South Africa selling the goods. Supt. J. E. Heg of the reformatory says that he has received orders for 11,000 dozen overalls more than he can fill, and the work will have to be turned out from institutions in Milwaukee and other cities. The reformatory overalls factory, which was formerly conducted in connection with the prison at Wau-pun, has been in operation in Green Bay about thirty days, and the boys are becoming proficient in the work in a marked degree. Mr. Heg says that twenty-seven pairs of overalls is the average daily task of each boy. One lad, in his ambition, one day turned out sixty-two pairs. There are forty-four boys employed in this factory and there are ninety-eight inmates at present in the entire institution.

Many boys, since the reformatory was erected, have been paroled. Some of them have become killed in trades and other vocations. There are apprentices among them who are earning $1.25 to $2 a day, and some are employed as cooks in lumber camps at $50 to $60 a month. "We have a forty-acre garden connected with the institution," said Mr. Heg, "the finest in Brown county, and those young boys who work in it are becoming proficient farmers."

Mr. Sakagami's ambition is to become a politician when he returns to his native country two years hence. He states his friends are preparing to welcome him home by electing him a member of Parliament to represent his province in the southern part of Japan.

A little later something got into his right eye, he rubbed it with the hand that had taken up the cloth. The eye commenced to itch and became inflamed. This morning it was completely closed and the right side of his face was discolored and badly swollen. A physician was called in to attend him.

The team was hitched in front of the Kientworth residence. The horse, a bay, became frightened and by taking the hitch 22 feet ran on to the street. At that instant Henry Kientworth drove in the street and the runaway team dashed into his fire. His 15-year-old daughter Leah was in the buggy and was thrown to the ground and badly hurt. Four inches of a horse were torn from the child and the other side of the skull was fractured.

Mr. Kientworth, who is 60 years old, sustained several wounds.

The little girl was taken to St. Anne's hospital and may not recover.

STRIKES A SNAG.

Contractors at Two Rivers Can't Find Place for Big Well.

Two Rivers, Wis., July 18. [Special.]—The Chicago parties who were awarded the contract for installing an electric light and waterworks plant have been experiencing considerable difficulty in locating a suitable well where sufficient water of good quality can be obtained. According to the contract the water supply was to be over 1,000,000 gallons per day, but no place suitable for a well has been found. It has therefore been necessary for the city council to grant the contractors an extension of time and the contract will either have to be altered so as to call for a less amount of water or authorize an intake tunnel built out into the lake at a great increase in cost.

NEW CITY HALL FOR MANITOWOC.

Common Council Considers Plans to Erect a $25,000 Building in Near Future.

Manitowoc, Wis., July 17. [Special.]—At the meeting of the city council last night the proposition of building a modern city hall had come up for discussion upon the suggestion of Mayor Rahr and was favorably commented upon by all the aldermen present. The plan is to purchase a suitable site on the south side and erect a $25,000 building there. The need of better quarters for the city officials has been fully felt for some time past. Competitive plans are to be drawn by various architects for the building. A committee of three, consisting of Ald. Rahr, Board and Pohl, was appointed by the mayor to report upon the matter of a site next Tuesday evening. A number of important matters are to come up for consideration at the next meeting of the council on Tuesday night.

TO ELECT A MAYOR.

Successor to the Late J. H. Merrill to be Selected by Oshkosh Council.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 17. [Special.]—Tonight will occur a meeting of the council when the matter of electing a successor to the late Mayor J. H. Merrill will be taken up. It was originally intended to wait until thirty days had elapsed out of respect for the memory of the late mayor, but a question of legality of some of the proceedings that must take place at once renders it desirable to have a properly-elected mayor. Ald. John Mulva, who is president of the council, is now acting mayor. While his official acts may hold good, there are doubts as to their validity. There are several candidates in the field, but Mr. Mulva has the advantage in the race from the fact that he is president of the council. He is a Democrat and is said to have the solid support of the Democratic majority in the council. However, there is some opposition to him because of his strenuous opposition to the waterworks company in the long-drawn-out controversy which has come to be the only steady issue if not the paramount one in city politics. Mr. Mulva has been a leader on the side of the anti-waterworks proposition and has shown himself to be very radical. For this reason there is a desire on the part of some of the more conservative members of the council to elect a mayor who would be more fitted to exercise a quasi-judicial responsibility that devolves upon the mayor as presiding officer when questions are under discussion in the council.

STATE FAIR.

Opens in Milwaukee September 10
—Programme for the Week.

From Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.
The character and extent of the Wisconsin state fair of 1900, to open September 10, has now been practically determined.

The citizens of Milwaukee have raised a loan of $150,000, with which to aid the state board of agriculture in organizing for and carrying on a great state fair.

As never before, the board now has sufficient funds for its work, and is warranted in offering to the public a week's entertainment, unequalled in the past, in our own state, and equal to that of any fair in the country the coming season.

Our officers of premiums guarantee us the largest exhibits in competitive classes ever made in the state, and these will be awarded and handled in a manner to give the greatest satisfaction to the visitor.

A very strong and varied line of special features has been secured, and every minute will present some instructive or entertaining event to the public.

Among these will be briefly enumerated:

A working dairy under direction of the dairy department of state university.

A cooking school and ladies' rest room under direction of Mrs. Armstrong of Chicago.

Headquarters of university agricultural students.

Exhibition herd of buffalo.

Gymnastic and equestrian performances in front of grand stand during races.

Excellent music in variety and abundance.

Wednesday will be military day, when the different departments of our state militia will be in attendance and give the public an illustration of practical military life and work.

Thursday the matched race between the world's renowned pacers, "Patches" and "Circuit," will be given.

A contest for supremacy between these rival "flyers" will be the great track event of the season.

Friday will be "athletic day," when the ordinary programme will be added a strong line of athletic events. Fine prizes will be offered, and competition arranged in a way to admit all classes of athletes—clubs, universities and colleges, high schools, professionals and amateurs.

It is expected to make this one of the leading athletic meets of the season in the country.

Our race programme is a very strong one, and the superintendent of speed already has assurances that an unusually large number of fine horses will be with us. The track is being put in the finest condition. Now please keep in mind that the great metropolitan event of the season will this year be the Wisconsin state fair, September 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14.

The railroads will give the lowest rates. Transportation between city and grounds will be ample and rapid, and the conduct of the fair will be generous, clean and courteous.

We will give you a great state fair, worthy of the state, our agricultural resources and of the patronage of the great public.

Look for additional notices of state fair in the papers. For premium lists or information of any kind relating to fair address the secretary at Madison.

It is said to be a very fine grade of Bessemer ore. Malmstadt is now at Crystal Falls. He wants $400 a month royalty.

Searching Parties Are Scouring
the Country Around

The little child got homesick for her mother and started off alone to find her, and has not to this hour been found.

There is little prospect of her being found alive, as the last three days there has been a continuous rain.

WANTS COADJUTOR BISHOP.

Archdeacon Jenner of Ashland in Conference with Bishop Grafton.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 16. [Special.]—Rev. A. George E. Jenner, archdeacon of Ashland of the Episcopal diocese of Fond du Lac, was in the city today, in conference with Bishop Grafton. He stated that he was in entire sympathy with the movement in the diocese for the election of a bishop coadjutor, stating that while the bishop was now able to carry on the work, his duties were constantly increasing, and with his advancing years it would be well for the diocese to give him an assistant. Father Jenner also believes that the coadjutor, if elected, will relieve the several archdeacons of the diocese of considerable of their work, although as a temporary expedient he thought their appointment was wise and that they have accomplished good results in the supervision of their respective districts.

SUGAR AS A STIMULANT.

Swiss Guides and Canadian Lumbermen Aware of Its Value.

The Swiss guides fully appreciate the value of sugar as a stimulant, and always carry it in their kits, preferring lump sugar or highly-sweetened chocolate. The Canadian lumbermen of Canada consume an extraordinarily large amount of sugar during the season in the woods, taking it in the form of molasses. They sweeten their milkless tea with it, make cakes with it and even add it to their fried salt pork, which is the only meat they get during the time they are in the woods cutting timber, and this is practically half the year. In the "black belt" of Alabama the staple articles of diet are also molasses, salt pork and cornmeal. These simple articles form the diet day in and day out, year about, and yet the negroes seem to thrive on them. But it is on the sugar-cane plantations, perhaps, where the value of sugar as an article of diet is most apparent. A pamphlet entitled "Sugar as Food," recently issued by the department of agriculture, referring to this fact, says: "For months the chief food of the negro laborers on the plantations is said to be sugar cane, and they are seen to grow strong and fat as the season advances. They go through the hard labor of harvesting the crop and come out in fine condition, although they began it weak and half starved."

It should be added, however, that the entire juice of ripened cane is more complete food than sugar, containing, as it does, other food constituents besides carbohydrates.

Children have a natural craving for sweet things, and the sugar of milk, which makes up from 4 to 6 per cent. of it, forms an important part of baby's first nutriment, taking the place of starch until the child's stomach is able to assimilate it, so that a 2-year-old child drinking two quarts of milk a day consumes in this way about three ounces of sugar.

A lump of sugar contains as much nutriment as an ounce of potato and is far more easily assimilated. In times of great exertion, as are likely to occur in army life, this feature is particularly valuable. In warm countries sugar takes the place of fat and either sugar or sweet fruits, as dates, figs, etc., are eaten in large quantities in tropical climates. As a source of muscular energy, sugar is rapidly becoming recognized, so that training diets are sometimes made to include large quantities of it, as, for instance, in the rowing clubs of Holland.—Philadelphia Record.

OLD HOUSE; OLDER TRAIL.

Two Peaceful Things of Which Kentucky Feels Proud.

Within a half mile of Gethsemane is an old brick house, which is without doubt the oldest brick house in Kentucky. It was erected in 1788 by Capt. Samuel Hanger, Capt. Pullinger came from Maryland and built the above-mentioned house where it now stands, near what was known then as Pullinger's Park. The lumber for the interior is made of native walnut, worked up by hand. The doors and frames are made of solid walnut, and are very heavy. The larks, nails and hinges came from Virginia, and were made by hand and brought on horseback over the old Wilderness road. The plastering was mixed with buffalo hair. This old house is still in the possession of the Hanger family, and it stands just as it did over 100 years ago, without any change whatever.

But few persons are aware of the fact that near Balltown is a path which was the old buffalo track leading from Louisville to Nashville, and was the old trail followed by the first pioneers into the unbroken wilds of Kentucky. This old trail was used as a road to Louisville until the building of the turnpike. The old trail is now a rough, unused path.—Boston Transcript.

Doomed Giants.

Whalers have begun to turn their attention to walrus and porpoises, large game having become too scarce to encourage exclusive pursuit. Elephants and camels, too, are melting away before the advance of agricultural enterprise, and the ostrich, with its congeners, the rheu and emu, will soon share the fate of the spay-footed moa, that once haunted the marshes of New Zealand.—Indianapolis Press.

FOUGHT GEN. GRANT.

A Wood County Man Who had a Scrap with Former President.

Probably the only man who ever had a rough and tumble fight with Gen. U. S. Grant is an old resident of Wood county, Dan Rezin, a farmer in the town of Rudolph. Forty years ago a controversy arose between the two men which by mutual consent was settled on the banks of the Mississippi near Galena, Ill.

For some years before the Civil war broke out Dan Rezin was employed as a lumber driver on the Wisconsin river, piloting immense rafts of lumber from the saw mills near Rudolph to the large cities of the south, occasionally going as far as St. Louis. This was before the shriek of the locomotive was heard in Wood county, and the Wisconsin river was the only route by which products could be transported to market. It was a rough and precarious existence and only the men of unusual courage and hardihood engaged in it. The driver started out from the mill with his raft for a trip of several hundred miles, never leaving his charge for a moment until delivered over to the firm to which consigned. His business was to guide its course so as to evade all rocks, whirlpools and dangerous rapids. The men knew perfectly every mile of the river's course and when a long stretch of smooth water was encountered would lie down and snatch an hour or two of sleep, sometimes awaking to find the raft beached on an island amid stream.

In the late fifties Galena, Ill., was an important river point, enjoying more prominence than it does today. This was the terminus of many of Rezin's trips and here he made the acquaintance of the man who in later years became one of the world's greatest generals.

Grant was employed as clerk at $50 a month in the tannery at Galena owned by his brothers Simpson and Orville. Being out of employment and having a wife and four children to support he was given the position at the request of his father. Here he set up housekeeping in a prudent way. His income did not meet his expenses. His brother raised his salary to $75. With this he did better and began to be more hopeful of a fair living. He was 38 years of age and had not yet developed the business faculty; had failed at St. Louis as a merchant and near that city as a farmer. He was better at telling stories than making bargains. The life of a teamster seemed to be the height of his ambition. This was the only occupation in which he distinguished himself above his fellows. He was very fond of horses and made long trips over almost impassable roads when many others failed. When asked once why his horses never got stalled, he replied, "because I never get stalled myself." Grant was a heavy, broad-shouldered man, giving to those who knew him not the slightest glimpse of any ability to be a great leader or in any way a marked man. His characteristics as then known to his neighbors would have led them to expect from him a fair lively-stable man rather than a military hero or a president of the republic. He was one of those who have become distinguished above their real merits by the circumstances which made the ladder on which they went up to fame. Had it not been for the war of the rebellion there is no probability that he would have attained the rank of an average man. But the breaking out of the war opened up a career to him which put him where he worked up to honor, to duty and to a great life.

Grant was very fond of wrestling and other sports. He had the reputation of being the best man for miles up or down the Mississippi at a rough and tumble fight. His meetings with lumber drivers were frequent, always popping out victorious where no other weapons were used than bare fists.

In the summer of 1850, Dan Rezin, guiding his raft of lumber into the mouth of the Fever river near Galena, encountered Grant in a flat boat. The channel being narrow at this point a dispute arose over the rights of the stream. After exchanging all the epithets for which river men are famous, it was decided to have it out on the bank, whither they repaired, several men who chanced to be in the neighborhood accompanying them to see the sport and make certain of fair play. Rezin was taller and weighed less than his stocky antagonist, but was descended from hardy Irish stock. In his thirtieth year, and a clever man with the gloves or in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match. Selecting a level green spot the men opened the struggle. It was a battle royal. At one stage it seemed as if Rezin would be pounded into insensibility and then Grant would be forced underneath to receive his share of punishment. For an hour the contest waged fast and furious, until both men were forced to relinquish from sheer exhaustion. They shook hands over the result and were good friends from that time forward.

Today Farmer Daniel Rezin is three score and ten years of age, possessed of all his faculties and going about his work with the suppleness of a man half his years. He is fond of story telling and of his long list there is none he likes better to repeat than his fight with the great American general, Ulysses S. Grant. Marshfield News.

Daly Gets His Bicycle.

The long lost bicycle belonging to Daly, the druggist, has been returned to him through the efforts of Chief McGovern, of Stevens Point. About two months ago a young lady giving her name as Bertha Koch rented a bicycle of Mr. Daly and did not return the same when the time was up. A few days ago Miss Koch was in the city and the ever watchful eye of Daly spotted the young lady on her way to the Green Bay depot bound for Stevens Point. Daly immediately repaired to said depot and accused the said young lady as being the renter of said bicycle. She, of course, denied the charge, and Daly not being certain of his bird, did not detain her. Nothing daunting, however, Daly telephoned a description of the young lady to Chief McGovern, and he, by a little clever detective work, secured the bicycle and expressed it to Daly yesterday. Following the bicycle came a letter from McGovern stating that he had "recouped" the young lady on another charge and asking Daly if he wished to enter a charge against her. Daly sent word back that so long as he had recovered the stolen property he was satisfied.

Under what charge the young lady is being held by Chief McGovern we have been unable to learn.

TROOPS TAKE TIEN TSIN.

Attack Upon Walled City on July 14 is Successful.

ALL FORTS CAPTURED.

Notwithstanding the Disaster on Friday Assault is Renewed and Victory is Won.

London, July 17, 12:15 p. m. The Daily Mail today gives the Associated Press the following dispatch from its Shanghai correspondent under date of July 17: "The allied troops resumed the attack upon the Chinese walled city of Tien Tsin on the morning of July 14, and succeeded in breaching the walls and capturing all the forts."

"The Chinese were completely routed and the allies took possession of the native city and its defenses."

"The total losses of the allies in the engagement of Thursday, Friday and Saturday were about 800 killed or wounded. The casualties were greatest among the Russians and Japanese."

"The guns of the allies, causing many large conflagrations and finally silenced the majority of the enemy's guns simultaneously. Then 1500 Russians, assisted by small parties of Germans and French, assaulted and captured eight guns that were in position on the railway embankment and the forts, the magazine of which the French subsequently blew up."

A body of Americans, British, Japanese and Austrian troops then made a sortie and attacked the west arsenal, which the Chinese had recaptured. After three hours of the hardest fighting yet experienced the Chinese fled."

When the arsenal had been evacuated by the Chinese, the Americans, French, Japanese and Welsh fusiliers advanced toward the native city and joined with the other attacking forces. The Japanese infantry and a mounted battery advanced to the foot of the walls, supported by the Americans and French. Despite valiant attacks, the allies were only able to hold the positions gained outside the walls preparatory to renewing the assault in the morning."

The casualties sustained by the allies were exceedingly heavy, especially those of the Americans, French and Japanese. Several explosions in the native city were caused by the bombardment. The Chinese appear to have exhausted their supply of smokeless powder, as they are now using black powder."

Confirmed by Admiral Remey.

Washington, D. C., July 17.—Admiral Remey this morning confirmed the naval department that the city and ports of Tien Tsin are in the hands of the allies. His list of killed and wounded is somewhat fuller than yesterday's report, but still not entirely complete. His dispatch follows:

"Chefoo, July 17.—Today hope to get wounded from Tien Tsin either in hospitals at Taku or aboard Solferino. Communication very uncertain; following casualties apparently confirmed:

Marines—Capt Davis, killed; Capt. Lemly, Lieut. Butler and Leonard, wounded; Capt. Liscum, killed; Maj. Reagan and Lieut. Capt. Noyes, Brewster and Bookmiller, Lieut. Noyes, Lawton, Hammond and Waldron, wounded. Total killed and wounded reported, 775. Russians and Japanese lost heavily; our total loss reported 215; about forty were marines, but number believed to be exaggerated. Have officer on shore especially to get authentic number of names, which will be promptly telegraphed. City and forts now in the hands of allies. Admiral Seymour returned to fleet; officer ashore is Admiral Alexieff at Tien Tsin."

Eight Guns Captured.

Tien Tsin, Friday, July 13.—In today's combined attack upon the native city over forty guns bombarded the Chinese positions. The fighting was most determined, and the allies' losses were heavy. Eight Chinese guns were captured and the Chinese were driven out of the west arsenal after a fierce cannonade."

A strong mixed force is now close to the walls and it is expected that an assault will be made tomorrow."

CONVICTED OF STEALING.

Strange Conduct of an American Girl in a London Hotel.

London, July 17.—Caroline E. Keyes pleaded guilty in the Marylebone police court yesterday to the charge of stealing a gold watch, bracelet, hairbrush and articles of clothing of the aggregate value of £29 from rooms in Norfolk Mansions hotel, where she had been staying. When the robbery was reported, the police interrogated Miss Keyes, who after a series of denials to the questions with which she was pitted for two hours, finally opened her trunk and displayed the missing articles. Her explanation was that she had been drinking brandy and while under the influence of the liquor took the property. The next morning she tried to replace the stolen property, but was unable to gain access to the room she had rented. In the course of the hearing Miss Keyes said she was an American, and had come to London to attend the World's Christian Endeavor convention as a delegate from a church in Minnesota. She had come to dissipate the gospel, she said, and while it was true she took the things, she was not guilty in her heart of stealing for she intended to restore the property if she had the chance. Ultimately Miss Keyes, who said she was without money, was remanded to allow her to call her witnesses as to her character."

Prince Tuan Said to Have Fixed Date for an Uprising.

AT WAR WITH RUSSIA.

A Dispatch from St. Petersburg Says that a Declaration Has Been Made.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—The state department has received a dispatch from Consul General Fowler at Chefoo, saying that the governor of Shandong writes that his cousin, Prince Tuan, on July 9, 18, had made a declaration of war against Russia. The declaration was still holding out.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—United States Minister Allen at Seoul, Corea, telegraphs the state department that Boxers and Chinese are in force within a few miles of the Korean frontier. The natives of Pungyang, the most northern province of Korea, are much alarmed and are fleeing. The foreigners remain in safety. The government is very anxious.

London, July 18.—The Express prints the following from its correspondent at Shanghai:

"Prince Tuan has issued an edict to fix a date for a general rising. What the date is I cannot ascertain, but it is doubtless an early one, for Prince Tuan is stated to have ordered all dispersed in view of the arrival of the foreign troops. A large body of Chinese tonight is reported to be moving from Hupai in the direction of Shanghai. The situation here grows more threatening every day. The city is still without any means of defense, and all the forts are being held by Chinese."

The entire region of the Yangtze is in a state of unrest. Shanghai is menaced with a native uprising, and the northern provinces are in open revolt."

Time to Keep Cool.

While the improvement in the situation at Tien Tsin is considerable the Chinese rebels are swarming outside the city and there are strong reasons for believing that the bulk of the regular army is situated in the Boxers' spirit of hatred against foreigners. This feeling of antagonism will be promoted if indirect appeals for vengeance and massacre, that are being made, are left upon another in the English press. It is a good time for everybody to keep cool and to avoid intemperate language, by which the work of the allied forces in China will be immeasurably increased. Civilized nations cannot make war with Oriental savagery and barbarism. They cannot wage war on a mission of vengeance, but may enter China as reformatory agents and do good work in the interest of civilization and humanity."

Stop Making Threats.

Men of sound judgment here affirm that as America could not make war on Cuba in revenge for the destruction of the Maine, but only as a moral agent, pledged to redeem the island from misrule, so also the civilized world must cease preaching that they will not be left upon another in the English press. It is a good time for everybody to keep cool and to avoid intemperate language, by which the work of the allied forces in China will be immeasurably increased. THE CHECK IS WORTHLESS

Clever Swindler Gets $475 Out of a Madison Lawyer.

HAS GONE WITH CASH.

Gets Attorney to Endorse a Check Which is Found to be a Forgery.

Madison, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—The smoothest of the many varieties of "check games," and one which is entirely new to this section at least, has just been worked successfully on one of Madison's shrewdest attorneys, F. E. Parkinson, who is out just $475 as the price of his experience.

It was done this way: A little more than a week ago a young man of good appearance called on Mr. Parkinson at his office and said he wanted to engage his services as an attorney. He gave his name as C. E. Scott, and said he came West from Pennsylvania about a year ago with $5000, with which he purchased an interest in the stock farm of his uncle, Thomas Scott, near Janesville. A few weeks ago, he said, he had taken three cartloads of stock to Chicago and sold them, receiving a little more than $3000. When he returned home his uncle was dissatisfied with the proceeds of the sale. They had a row over it, and his uncle told him they would consider the partnership at an end. He had kept the money he received for the cattle, about $2500, after deducting expenses, and would be willing to settle for $1500 more, being satisfied to get his money back. It was to secure this $1500 that he wanted Mr. Parkinson's services.

The attorney naturally agreed to take the case in hand, and wrote a letter to Thomas Scott, requesting a settlement at $1500. Next day his client came to the office to see if there was a reply, but none had been received. He came again next day, and, being told no answer had come from Thomas Scott, stated that he had just had a conversation over the telephone with his cousin, a daughter of Thomas Scott, and that she told him her father had decided to settle on the terms offered, and would send the amount, $500 in cash and the remaining $1000 in a note, through Janesville attorneys.

Next came a letter to Mr. Parkinson, signed Thomas Scott, saying he had sent the cash and note through Whitehead & Matheson of Janesville, to the legal firm of Buell & Hanks of this city. The same morning Buell & Hanks received a letter, typewritten on the stationery of the client, head & Matheson, enclosing a certified check for $500 and a note for $1000, both signed Thomas Scott. Suspecting nothing wrong, Hanks went to Parkinson's office, where the sharper was waiting, turned over the check and note, taking C. E. Scott's receipt in full, and the matter was considered closed.

The check was made payable to Mr. Parkinson as Scott's attorney, and he took it to the State bank to have it cashed. The teller suggested that he send it in for collection, and gave the 50 cents exchange due on a certified check, but Mr. Parkinson was sure it was all right, and that he would charge the 50 cents up to his client, who was in a hurry for his money. Then he endorsed the check, received the $500, and returning to his office gave all of it to his client except $25 which he retained for his services.

Then Scott disappeared. Next day was Sunday, and he probably spent it in traveling. Monday the check came back from the Janesville bank on which it was drawn, branded as a forgery. The same day a letter came to Buell & Hanks from Whitehead & Matheson asking what their letter regarding a settlement in the Scott case meant. They had never heard of it. Inquiry at the postoffice where a letter had been sent Thomas Scott developed the further fact that there was no such man. The whole tale had been cleverly concocted by the sharper as a means of working off his $475 check, and he did it most successfully.

DR. FOX DIDN'T KNOW.

Must Pay for Missing Cattle Held by Him as Executor.

Omaha, Neb., July 18.—Judge Vinson Hader decided the Tussler will case and rendered judgment against the Philip Fox of Madison, Wis., executor of the estate of the late John Fox, in the sum of $40,000. The executor has failed to account for a lot of livestock, including 550 head of horses that he loaned on the estate in the western part of the state. In his deposition the executor admitted that he was not up in that line of business and insisted that he had left the matter in the hands of his lawyer. He said he did not have the slightest idea what had become of the property and his attorney did not go into that phase of the case. The court held that the executor should have known, and said he would have to pay for his failure to have knowledge of the affairs entrusted to him. The estate is that of Mrs. Catherine Tussler, widow of a prominent cattleman and mother of Mrs. H. P. Stoddard of Omaha.

BLUEBERRY CROP VERY POOR.

Indians Feeling Blue and Outlook is Discouraging.

West Superior, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—The blueberry crop in this county is now being harvested, and there are a great many Indians that are feeling exceedingly blue over the outlook. The condition of the crop is likely to cause very hard times among these people this summer. The yield this year is only a small percentage of the average yield, an account of the great drought which prevailed early in the season. The Indians are now getting as high as $3 a bushel for them, whereas they got but about $1.50 per bushel a year ago. Even at this figure, however, the income from that source will be comparatively very small.

But the heavy rains of the previous week and especially Sunday and Monday morning made it impossible to carry out the program and prevented many of the cranberry folk from appearing. Vice president S. N. Whittlesey, Sec. W. H. Fitch of the Wis. state cranberry growers association with Robt. Skeel, Richard Resin, Charles Whittlesey, Mrs. Whittlesey and daughter improved the opportunity in letting the Press association know "where they were at" and presented a number of button hole bouquets and a large basket of the vines and growing fruit. Exciting Runaway.

The following was received by the editor and is published by request:

Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, of Norcross, a newlywed pair, took their trial life July twelfth. Thursday evening, after supper they went out driving. There were three rigs, the first contained Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jackson, the second Mr. Chas. Kline and Mrs. Minnie Henke, and the third or last rig contained Mrs. Emma Dammert and Mr. Andrew Shroder.

After being half way around their trip around the lake, which took place just below Mr. Yonks' hill on the two corners which meet and belong to Mr. Yonks and Mr. Heiser. They came down the hill on a dead end then turned the corner up towards Mr. C. H. Helsen going around the corner the carriage tipped over the top and the wedded pair slid on the wire fence and the horse and four wheels started up the road on a more deadly run. The horse ran up as far into the woods as it could and then they caught it. When they brought back the horse they loaded up their truck and changed their huggies. Mr. Jackson waved his hat, but they looked as cheap as if the children had taken their bread away.

The old people will know better next time, than to let children drive themselves, next time they will send a driver with them. Instead of turning around the corner, they turned the corner around, they plowed the soil all up. There were peanuts and a cigar pretty well wrecked up and pieces of carriage scattered all over.

Coadjutor Bishop.

Bishop Grafton, of the Fond du Lac diocese, has asked for the appointment of a bishop coadjutor for the diocese. The standing committee has acceded to the Bishop's request, and will on the 30th day of August hold a special election for that purpose. One reason why the announcement is important is the fact that the coadjutor will become bishop of the diocese on the death of Bishop Grafton.

The bishop announced that he would release his own salary that it might be given to the coadjutor.

Bishop Grafton has issued an invitation to the clergy of the diocese to attend a retreat to be held at Grafton Hall, August 23 and 29. Bishop Grafton has presided over the diocese for eleven years and the increasing work, together with his advancing years, he being now seventy-one are the reasons assigned for taking this step.

Among the names suggested for the position are those of Rev. R. H. Weller, of Stevens Point, and Rev. B. Tabbot Rogers, of Fond du Lac. In the selection of a coadjutor bishop the standing committee could do no better than to choose the Rev. Father Weller and his many friends and followers in this city would be more than pleased to have him named for the position.

Is It Right for an Editor to Recommend Patent Medicines.

From Sylvan Valley News, Brevard, N. C.

It may be a question whether the editor of a newspaper has the right to recommend any of the various proprietary medicines which flood the market, yet as a preventive of suffering we feel it a duty to say good word for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. We have known and used this medicine in our family for twenty years and have always found it reliable. In many cases a dose of this remedy would save hours of suffering while a physician is awaited. We do not believe in deceptive medicine on any medicine for a cure, but we do believe that if a bottle of Chamberlain's Diarrhoea Remedy were kept on hand and administered at the inception of an attack much suffering might be avoided and in many cases the presence of a physician would not be required. At least this has been our experience during the past twenty years. For sale by Johnson & Hill Co.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Haggerty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was Yellow Jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by Johnson & Hill Co., druggist.

THE RAILWAY IS BLAMED

North-Western Road Responsible for Death of Jacob Kolf.

GUILTY OF NEGLIGENCE.

Daughter Tells Coroner's Jury the Story of Her Father's Terrible Death.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—The Chicago & North-Western Railroad company was found guilty of negligence yesterday afternoon by a coroner's jury impelled to inquire into the manner and cause of death in the case of Jacob Kolf, who was killed by the cars last week at the Wisconsin avenue crossing of the North-Western tracks in this city. The jury found that the railroad company was guilty of negligence because it did not maintain a flagman at this crossing, especially since the testimony tended to prove that the cars, which killed Mr. Kolf, were "kicked" across the street in what is termed a flying switch.

Miss Barbara Kolf, a daughter of the deceased, was at the inquest. She told in broken accents the story of her father's terrible death, of which she was a witness. She said her father seemed to be pushed along the track for a short distance at a rate faster than that of a car, and in a moment he was thrown to the ground and crushed to death under the wheels. His head was taken off in the horrible disaster completely and for a few minutes after that time he lay on the ground. Presently she calmed herself and said that when she realized that her father was killed she looked at the top of the car and saw a brakeman at the brake. She screamed and exclaimed in anguish: "Oh, my God, you have killed my father." Miss Kolf was not subjected to a rigid examination owing to her nervous condition. It is probable, however, that the matter will not be dropped by the relatives of the deceased.

MAKE OVERALLS.

Average of 1000 Pairs a Day Turned Out at Green Bay Reformatory.

Green Bay, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—An average of 1000 pairs of overalls are being manufactured daily at the reformatory in this city. The contractors for whom the garments are made have an agent in South Africa selling the goods. Supr. J. E. Heg of the reformatory says that over 1000 pairs of overalls are made each day. The work will be turned out from institutions in Milwaukee and other cities. The reformatory overalls factory, which was formerly conducted in connection with the prison at Waupun, has been in operation in Green Bay about ninety days, and the boys are becoming proficient in the work in a marked degree. Mr. Heg says that twenty-seven pairs of overalls is the average daily task of each boy. One lad, in his ambition, one day turned out sixty-two pairs. There are forty-four boys employed in this factory and there are ninety-eight inmates at present in the entire institution. Many boys, since the reformatory was erected, have been reformed. Some of them have become skilled in trades and other vocations. There are carpenters among them who are earning $1.25 to $2 a day, and some are employed as cooks in lumber camps at $50 to $60 a month. "We have a fine garden connected with the institution," said Mr. Heg, "the finest in Brown county, and those young boys who work in it are becoming proficient farmers."

WANTS TO BE A POLITICIAN.

Ambition of a Young Jap Studying at University of Wisconsin.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—A very interesting young Japanese named Y. Sakagami is attending college in this city. This young gentleman is taking a course in the University of Wisconsin, and is making his way through college by selling Japanese furniture in bamboo. In spite of almost insurmountable obstacles, such as the necessity of learning an entirely different tongue from his own he has acquired a college education that is hardly equaled by American youths. Mr. Sakagami's ambition is to become a politician when he returns to his native country. He has hence. He states his friends are preparing to welcome him home by electing him a member of Parliament to represent his province in the southern part of Japan.

MAY LOSE AN EYE.

New York Traveling Man Poisoned at Oshkosh.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—H. E. Smith of New York is at the Palmer house in this city with a bad eye, the indication being that the eye is poisoned. While in Oshkosh yesterday Mr. Smith says he became interested in a bundle of advertising matter near the depot. On the bundle was a soiled cloth which he took up and threw to one side. A little later, something getting into his right eye, he rubbed it with the hand that had taken up the cloth. The eye commenced to itch and became inflamed. This morning it was completely closed and the right side of his face was discolored and it was feared a physician was called in to attend him.

LIVELY TIME AT A DANCE.

Guests Use Axes, Clubs and Stones in a Free-for-All Fight.

Green Bay, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—A dance given at the home of John Kietelka in the town of Suomus, on the Siles road, resulted in a free-for-all fight between about twenty Poles and six young men of other nationalities. Axes, clubs and stones were used and the young fellows were finally driven away more or less bruised.

Two Men Near Death.

Marquette, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—Rasmus Pierson and John Anderson, two Menominee men, had a narrow escape from death. A horse which they were driving was struck by a North-Western passenger train. The horse was cut to pieces and the carriage, with the two men in it, was tossed about twenty feet on to the depot platform. Neither man was hurt.

Leave for Alaska.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—A party of Fond du Lac people, composed of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McDonald, Capt. W. A. Knapp and Miss Minnie Knapp, accompanied by Mrs. Part L. Shepard of Chicago, left for Alaska last night. They will make a tour of the gold fields and return early in the fall.

Won't Give Up Club and Star.

Racine, Wis., July 17.—The Fire and Police commission held a meeting and sustained the action of Chief of Police Schumacher in suspending John Goetz, a member of the police force. Goetz now refuses to hand over his club and star.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY.

Henry Kleintworth and Little Daughter Are Very Badly Hurt at Fond du Lac.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—The team of M. S. Batchelor of the town of Byron ran away this morning and as a result two persons are seriously injured, a horse nearly killed and his wagon and a rig owned by Henry Kleintworth all smashed to pieces.

The team was hitched in front of the postoffice this morning. The horse became frightened and breaking the hitching strap ran away down the street. At that moment Henry Kleintworth drove in the street and the runaway team dashed into his rig. His 11-year-old daughter Louise was in the wagon and was thrown to the ground and terribly hurt. Four inches of her scalp were torn from the skull and the outer table of the skull was fractured.

Mr. Kleintworth, who is 60 years old, sustained several wounds. He is at St. Agnes' hospital and may not recover. Mr. Kleintworth's horse was thrown to the ground and badly injured. The runaway team dashed on for two blocks and was finally caught in the mailhouse yards.

STRIKES A SNAG.

Contractors at Two Rivers Can't Find Place for Big Well.

Two Rivers, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—The Chicago parties who were awarded the contract for installing an electric light and waterworks plant have been experiencing considerable difficulty in locating a suitable well where sufficient water of good quality can be obtained. According to the contract the water supply was to be over 1,000,000 gallons per day, but no place suitable for a well has been found. It has therefore been necessary for the city council to grant the contractors an extension of time and the contract will either have to be altered so as to call for a less amount of water or authorize an intake tunnel built out into the lake at a great increase in cost.

The excursion numbered 500 and was the largest yet to go over the trolley line from Harvard to Lake Geneva.

NEW CITY HALL FOR MANITOWOC.

Common Council Considers Plans to Erect a $25,000 Building in Near Future.

Manitowoc, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—At the meeting of the city council last night the proposition of building a modern city hall here came up for discussion upon the suggestion of Mayor Rahr and was favorably commented upon by all the aldermen present. The plan is to purchase a suitable site on the south side and erect a $25,000 building thereon. The need of better quarters for the city officials has been made felt for some time past. Competitive plans are to be drawn by various architects for the building. A committee of three consisting of Ald. Blesch, Eiegel and Pohl, was appointed by the council to report upon the matter of a site next Tuesday evening. A number of important matters are to come up for consideration at the next meeting of the council on Tuesday night.

TO ELECT A MAYOR.

Successor to the Late J. H. Merrill to be Selected by Oshkosh Council.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—Tonight will occur a meeting of the council, when the matter of electing a successor to the late Mayor J. H. Merrill will be taken up. It was originally intended to wait until thirty days had elapsed out of respect for the memory of the late mayor but a question of legality of some of the proceedings that must take place at once renders it desirable to have a properly-elected mayor. Ald. Mulva, who is president of the council, is now acting mayor. When his official acts may hold good, there are bonds to be signed and a duly-elected mayor is wanted to dispel any doubt. There are several candidates in the field, but Mr. Mulva has the advantage in the race from the fact that he is president of the council. He is a Democrat and is said to have the solid support of the Democratic majority in the council. However, there is some opposition to him because of his strenuous opposition to the waterworks company in the long-drawn-out controversy, which has been to be the only steady issue if not the paramount one in city politics. Mr. Mulva has been a leader on the side of the anti-waterworks people, and has shown himself to be very radical. For this reason there is a desire on the part of some of the more conservative members of the council to elect a mayor who would be more fitted to exercise a quasi-judicial responsibility that devolves upon the mayor as presiding officer when questions are under discussion in the council.

COVERED WITH BLOOD.

Prisoner in Marinette Jail Cuts Artery but Fails to Die.

He is awaiting trial for shooting at a man whom he claimed owed him 50 cents.

STATE FAIR.

Opens in Milwaukee September 10—Programme for the Week.

From Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. The character and extent of the Wisconsin state fair of 1900, to open September 10, has now been practically determined.

The citizens of Milwaukee have raised a bonus of $15,000, with which to aid the state board of agriculture in arranging for and carrying on a great state fair.

As never before, the board now has sufficient funds for its work, and is warranted in offering to the public a week's entertainment, unequalled in the past, in our own state, and equal to that of any fair in the country the coming season.

Our offers of premiums guarantee us the largest exhibits in competitive classes ever made in the state, and these will be awarded and handed in a manner to give the greatest satisfaction to the visitor. A very strong and varied line of special features has been secured, and every minute will present some instructive or entertaining event to the public. Among these will be briefly enumerated:

A working dairy under direction of the dairy department of state university. A cooking school and ladies' rest room under direction of Mrs. Armstrong of Chicago.

Headquarters of university agricultural students. Exhibition herd of buffalo. Gymnastic and trapeze performances in front of grand stand during races.

Excellent music in variety and abundance. Wednesday will be military day, when the different departments of our state militia will be in attendance and give public an illustration of practical military life and work.

Thursday the matched race between the world's renowned pacers, "Patchen" and "Gentry" will be given. A contest for supremacy between these rival "drivers" will be the great track event of the season.

Friday will be "athletic day," when the ordinary programme will be added a strong line of athletic events. Fine prizes will be offered, and competition arranged in a way to admit all classes of athletes, including students and colleges, high schools, professionals and amateurs.

It is expected to make this one of the leading athletic meets of the season in the country.

Our racing programme is a very strong one, and the superintendent of sport already has assurances that an unusually large number of fine horses will be with us. The track is being put in the finest condition. Now please keep in mind the great metropolitan event of the season will this year be the Wisconsin state fair, September 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14. The railroads will give the lowest rates. Transportation between city and grounds will be ample and rapid, and the conductor of the fair will be generous, clean and courteous.

We will give you a great state fair, worthy of the state, our agricultural resources and of the patronage of the great public.

Look for additional notices of state fair in the papers. For program list or information of any kind relating to fair address the secretary at Madison.

SUDDEN WEALTH.

A Marinette House Painter Finds Himself a Rich Man—Offered $50,000 for Property.

Marinette, Wis., July 16.—Alex Malmstadt, a house painter living here, has suddenly become rich. Several years ago he purchased two tracts of land near Crystal Falls, Mich., and sold the timber on them. He kept the land because he was unable to dispose of it, as it was deemed worthless. A mining company has now offered him a lump sum of $50,000 for the property and agreed to pay him $200 a month royalty as long as iron was taken out of it. It is said to be of a very fine grade of Bessemer ore. Malmstadt is now at Crystal Falls. He wants $400 a month royalty.

LITTLE CHILD LOST.

Searching Parties Are Scouring the Country Around Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Wis., July 16.—[Special.]—A searching party of fifty left here last night on a Marshallfield & South-eastern train to look for a 3-year-old child which has been lost three days. The party returned this morning, having been unsuccessful. Another trainload left this morning.

The child is the daughter of a Polish family. The man and wife left the child and another, a little older, in the house alone while they went off about a mile to make hay. The child got homesick for her mother and started off alone to find her, and has not to this hour been found. There is little prospect of her being found alive, as the last three days there has been a continuous rain.

LEAVES FOR CHINA.

In his senior year at the Naval academy Hanrahan won the amateur championship of the United States in swordsmanship, beating representatives of several of the big college and athletic clubs of the East. He is a graduate of Ryan high school of Appleton.

WANTS COADJUTOR BISHOP.

Archdeacon Jenner of Ashland in Conference with Bishop Grafton.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 16.—[Special.]—Rev. A. George E. Jenner, archdeacon of Ashland of the Episcopal diocese of Fond du Lac, was in the city today in conference with Bishop Grafton. He stated that he was in entire sympathy with the movement in the diocese for the election of a bishop coadjutor, stating that while the bishop was now able to carry on the work, his duties were constantly increasing, and with his advancing years it would be well for the diocese to give him an assistant. Father Jenner also believes that the several archdeacons of the diocese of considerable of their work, although as a temporary expedient he thought their appointment was wise and that they have accomplished good results in the supervision of their respective districts.

AGED MANUFACTURER DEAD.

W. B. Gaston of Beloit Passes Away Age 85 Years.

Beloit, Wis., July 16.—[Special.]—N. B. Gaston of N. B. Gaston & Sons' scale works, a pioneer manufacturer, died today at the age of 85 years. He established a scale shop in this city in 1837.

SUGAR AS A STIMULANT.

Swiss Guides and Canadian Lumbermen Aware of Its Value.

The Swiss guides fully appreciate the value of sugar as a stimulant, and always carry it in their kits, preferring lump sugar or highly-sweetened chocolate. The muscular lumbermen of Canada consume an extraordinarily large amount of sugar during the season in the woods, taking it in the form of molasses. They sweeten their milkless tea with it, make cakes with it and even add it to their fried salt pork, which is the only meat they get during the time they are in the woods cutting lumber, and this is practically half the year. In the "black belt" of Alabama the staple articles of diet are also molasses, salt pork and cornmeal. These staple articles form the diet day in and day out, year around, and the negroes seem to thrive on them. But it is on the sugar-cane plantations, perhaps, where the value of sugar as an article of diet is most apparent. A pamphlet entitled "Sugar as Food," recently issued by the department of agriculture, referring to this fact, says: "For months the chief food of the negro laborers on the plantations is said to be sugar cane, and they have been seen to grow strong and fat as the season advanced. They go through the hard labor of harvesting the crop and come out in fine condition, although they began it weak and half-starved." It should be added, however, that the entire juice of ripened cane is more complete food than sugar, containing, as it does, other food constituents besides carbohydrates.

Children have a natural craving for sweet things, and the sugar of milk, which makes up from 4 to 6 per cent. of it, forms an important part of the first nutriment, taking the place of starch until the child's stomach is able to assimilate it, so that a 2-year-old child drinking two quarts of milk a day consumes in this way about three ounces of sugar.

A lump of sugar contains as much nutriment as an ounce of potato and is far more easily assimilated. In times of great exertion, as are likely to occur in army life, this feature is particularly valuable. In warm countries sugar takes the place of fat and either sugar or sweet fruits, as dates, figs, etc., are eaten in large quantities in tropical climates. As a source of muscular energy, sugar is rapidly becoming recognized, so that training diets are sometimes made to include large quantities of it, as, for instance, in the rowing clubs of Holland.—Philadelphia Record.

OLD HOUSE; OLDER TRAIL.

Two Peaceful Things of Which Kentucky Feels Proud.

Within a half mile of Gettsemane is an old brick house which is without doubt the oldest brick house in Kentucky. It was erected in 1783 by Capt. Samuel Pottinger. Capt. Pottinger came from Maryland, and built the above-mentioned house where it now stands, near the old mill race, then as Pottinger's house. The lumber for the interior is made of native walnut, worked up by hand. The doors and frames are made of solid walnut, and are very heavy. The floors, nails and hinges came from Virginia, and were made by hand and brought on horseback over the old wilderness road. The plastering was mixed with buffalo hair. This old house is still in the possession of the Pottinger family, and it stands just as it did over 100 years ago, without any change whatever.

But few persons are aware of the fact that near Belton is a path which was the old buffalo track leading from Louisville to Nashville, and was the old trail followed by the first pioneers into the unbroken territory of Kentucky. This old broken trail was used as a road to Louisville till the building of the turnpike. The old trail is now a rough, unused path.—Boston Transcript.

Many Species of Molluscs.

The molluscs collected by the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition are found to include thirty-six species from Kolguev and sixty-six from Franz Josef Land, these being the most northerly points from which molluscs have been obtained. The total number of species known from the coast of Norway is 460.—Syracuse Herald.

Strawberries for Rheumatism.

Many years ago, Linnaeus declared that gout might be prevented by a free use of strawberries night and morning; while later times have proved strawberries to be especially beneficial to persons of anemic or rheumatic tendencies.

Doomed Giants.

Whalers have begun to turn their attention to walrus and porpoises, large game having become too scarce to encourage exclusive pursuit. Elephants and camels, too, are being away before the advance of agriculture, water-pipe, and the ostrich, with its congeners, the rheu and emu, will soon share the fate of the splay-footed moa that once haunted the marshes of New Zealand.—Indianapolis Press.

A train had to stop in Coffee county, Tenn., to allow a bear to get off the track.

SHROUDED WITH GLOOM.

Something Worse than Fog is Hanging Over London These Days.

London, July 14.—The most brilliant garden party of Queen Victoria's reign has proven quite ineffectual to dispel the anxiety and gloom hanging over Great Britain. The escape from the massacre of Sir Frederic Mitchell Hodgson, the governor of the Nova Scotia colony, and his wife and party, and the safety of the majority of those who so long were in the hands of the bandits, created a momentary feeling of thankfulness and jubilation. But this was quickly dispelled by the news of the disaster at Nitra's Nek and the gravity of the news from China. A week that opened with high hopes from all quarters of the globe where Great Britain's interests are imperiled, closed with none of those hopes realized, except as regards Ashanti, and even there an English garrison still awaits relief. In South Africa the nation was prepared for, though it did not really anticipate, guerrilla warfare. But repeated disasters of such magnitude as that of Nitra's Nek create dismay. It is no exaggeration to say the country is unanimous in desiring the end of the long-drawn-out struggle. The signs, however, do not point to a speedy realization of that desire. Therefore, the government has practically decided to put off the election until 1901.

Queen's Garden Party.
While the royal garden party failed in its purpose, it was a wonderful affair. Peers and peeresses, generals and Indian rajahs, princes and princesses, leading statesmen, heads of professions and church dignitaries, intermingled, forming a dazzling mass of color against the green background of the Buckingham palace lawns. After chatting with a few guests the Queen drove out through double lines of visitors, probably as distinguished as those who followed her to land. Cabinet ministers, ambassadors, actors, princes, doctors and lawyers stood bareheaded till the sovereign was out of the grounds. Apart from the garden party, the talk of the week has been the Astor-Milne affair. Mr. Astor's departure for Marienbad created no end of quips and comments, but there seems no reason to believe it was in any way due to this circumstance.

"Mr. William Waldorf Astor," says Vanity Fair, "is at Marienbad and Marienbad is quieter than London," adding that "most people support the sailor man."

Seathing Denunciation of Astor.
The Saturday Review, of which Lord Hardwicke is editor and with which several other prominent people are connected, scathingly denounces Mr. Astor's treatment of Capt. Milne, and refers to it as "a gross violation of etiquette," adding: "Milne is a moral officer of high rank and distinguished service, the father of whose ship Astor, with all his millions, is not worthy to untie. We only regret that the gallant servant of her majesty so far forgot his dignity as to accept a second-hand invitation to the house of the mercenary American, whose dollars could not save him from the contempt of his countrymen. Mr. Astor wishes his entertainments to be exclusive. His desire is likely to be gratified in future beyond his expectations."

Energy of American Ladies.
The departure of the American hospital ship Maine for China meets with warm approval both on official and unofficial England. The way this decision was arrived at is a happy illustration of the energy of the American ladies on the committee. The matter was only proposed Saturday last and between that and Wednesday everything was settled. The ship was refitted and sailed. The Maine will take care of Americans and British only, as Germany and the other nations are also sending hospital ships. The Queen was especially pleased at the promptitude with which the committee acted in this matter and conveyed to Bernard Baker and several ladies of the committee for all the Americans had done and are doing in the matter.

The difficulties which stood in the way of Lady Randolph Churchill's wedding now seem to have been overcome and the event is fixed for July 28. It will be attended by the Cornwallis West family and Winston Churchill, who has started from South Africa for England. The affair will be quiet. The wedding breakfast will be served at Moreton Frewen's residence.

With the announcement of the wedding, the departure of the Maine for China, the appearance of volume five of her Anglo-Saxon review, and her garden party at the Normal College for the Blind, Thursday, Lady Randolph Churchill will be very much to the fore this week.

Convention Repudiated.
The London Trades Council has adopted a resolution formally repudiating the convention of English-speaking democracies called by the council of Russian hall in the interests of which labor delegates are to meet in the United States. The council now in the so-called Anglo-Saxon alliance as "that jingo question." When the delegates return they will have a good many questions to answer. The coming of hot weather is not welcomed by the Londoners and a general exodus is beginning. It is feared that another spell like that of last year is impending. Until the beginning of this week London's death rate, thanks to the cool weather, was the lowest in seven years—only 15.5. The annual mobilization of the British navy preparatory to the maneuvers passed off without incident. Judging from the maneuver plans issued by the admiralty little more has been learned of this year's opera-

HEALTHY WOMEN.

Mary J. Kennedy, manager of Armour & Co.'s Exhibit at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha, Neb., writes the following of Peruna, as a cure for that common phase of summer catarrh, known as indigestion.

"I found the continual change of diet incidental to eight years' traveling completely upset my digestive system. In consulting several physicians they decided I suffered with catarrh of the stomach. Their prescriptions did not seem to help me any, so, reading of the remarkable cures effected by the use of Peruna, I decided to try it, and soon found myself well repaid. 'I have now used Peruna for about three months and feel completely rejuvenated. I believe I am permanently cured, and do not hesitate to give unstinted praise to your great remedy, Peruna.'"

The causes of summer catarrh are first, chronic catarrh; second, derangements of the stomach and liver; third, impure blood.

Such being the case, anyone who knows anything whatever about the operations of Peruna can understand why this remedy is a permanent cure for summer catarrh. It eradicates chronic catarrh from the system, invigorates the stomach and liver, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and therefore permanently cures by removing the cause—a host of maladies peculiar to hot weather. The cause being removed the symptoms disappear of themselves.

HE HAS CAUGHT THE CAR.

Why Sousa No Longer Talks of His Life.

And did you notice this, that as soon as Mr. Sousa reached the "Washington Post March" period of his life he had no more autographing to do? Perhaps some of his admirers are interested in him now; he lives very comfortably, indeed; he performs at the Metropolitan Opera house, which stands tolerably high among the theaters of the country; his hand is to play at the Paris exposition. Why should he not talk about his later life? Because he is an Arcadian, and so knows what is dramatic and what is not.

See that man running for a car. He waves his umbrella. Perhaps some of the scrumptious pedestrians help him. They hail him: "Hail! hail! hail! Conductor!" The women lean out of the windows; the children stop their games. The car goes bumping along the silly conductor dreams as he leans against the dashboard. But he is not by even his ear detects a noise; even his eye observes a commotion. He turns, sees the man, gives the motorman the bell to stop, and pulls the passenger aboard. All interest in the man that ran for the car ceases. The woman looks at their heads; the children resume their quarrel where they left off; the pedestrians mind their own affairs. They are glad if they helped to call the conductor's attention, but they don't care to know that now the man is sitting down, now he is wiping his forehead, now he says to the conductor: "Why didn't you stop when I hollered at you?" Now he gives the conductor a dime, and the conductor gives him back a nickel and rings up the fare. They are satisfied to know that it must be all right with him now that he has caught the car.

Mr. Sousa may be said to have caught the car.—From Ainslee's Magazine.

How Noise Travels.

The whistle of a locomotive is heard 2,300 yards through the air, the noise of the railway train 2,800, the report of a rifle and the bark of a dog 1,800 yards, an orchestra or the roll of a drum 1,000 yards, the human voice reaches to a distance of 900 yards, the chirping of crickets 800 yards. Distinct speaking is heard in the air above to a distance of 600 yards; from above it has a range of only 100 yards downward.

Hawaiian Pronunciations.

Hawaiians call their chief islands Hah-wy-ee; we say Hah-wee-ee. Other proper ways of giving well-known Hawaiian names are: Oahu—O-ah-u. Honolulu—Hoo-lou-lu. Kona—Koo-nah. Lanai—Lah-nay. Maui—Mau-ee. Kahala—Kah-lah-lah. Vowels are as in Italian, and deserve much care; Hawaiians pay little attention to consonants.—Baltimore News.

Arrests Avalanches.

Thickly-planted trees are the best protection against avalanches. The snow which has fallen in the woods cannot well shift its place, and when the masses of snow from the slopes above dash against the timber they are unable to break through so strong a barrier, and after overturning some of the first trees their progress is arrested.—Forest Leaves.

Windows Made of Shells.

A shell, the so-called Chinese window glass, which is double, about nine inches in diameter, and completely transparent, is used in the Philippine islands as a substitute for window glass. This shell may be used without any further preparation. It is glossy inside, and the lot, tropical sunlight is pleasantly subdued by transmission through it. Paint pictures, even, are clearly discernible on the shell. The only way by which this shell may be distinguished from glass is by the yearly rings which appear on the outside of it.—Philadelphia Record.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. BOSTON'S ANCIENT LANDMARK Tree that was the Pride of the Revolutionists Falls.

During a severe gale on June 5 the ancient and greatly-revered Boston elm on the common was blown down. No one was in the immediate vicinity at the time and no injury to anyone resulted, but the tree, which had been the pride of the city for many years, was completely destroyed. The elements attracted a crowd of men and boys who immediately attached the ruin and secured mementoes.

Soon three police officers were stationed about the remnants of the tree to prevent speculation for any purpose. But the mischief had been done and thus ended Boston's most ancient landmark, the old elm.

For years the elm had been the chief object of interest in the historic common. It was without doubt the oldest known tree in New England, and had been a landmark in the history of the city of Boston, the existence of which it probably antedated several years. Symmetrical in shape and of unusual size, the great elm was a thing of beauty. Frank Lee says that in early days it was a landmark for sailors, and that it was the scene of witchcraft delusions. Ann Hibbins met an ignominious death upon it. That was in 1659.

A map of Boston, printed in 1722, found room to locate the tree and from that time the Revolution it was cherished with pride by the citizens of Boston. It continued to flourish for half a century after independence was secured, but a great storm in 1822 did it much damage. In 1844 a substantial iron band was placed around the tree by the city authorities to prevent acts of vandalism.

In the great gale of 1890 the tree's largest limb was torn off, and though it was restored as far as possible and the cavity filled up, the life of the old elm had received a shock from which it never recovered.

In September, 1899, the hurricane that swept away the roof of the first Coliseum building and leveled several of the Boston church spires, carried off the tree's great branch. Since then the tree has been slowly dying.—Providence Journal.

Vampires Not Bloodsuckers.

James Rhen, who is engaged in a special study of bats, says that it is a fallacy that the vampire is a bloodsucker. The vampire is a bat, and bats are responsible for the story of the terrible blood-sucking vampire bats of South America. Nearly all general writers in that section agree with him as to its criminal record, and they all concur in having the bat on a large, grotesque-looking bat, with an enormous leaf nose—the vampyrus spectrum. This bat is common in South and Central America, and from his great size, being about two feet across the outspread wings, is suggestive and regularly enough subject to incite the blood-loving habits of. As a matter of fact, this is a somewhat useful animal, and is totally innocent of these charges. The bloodsuckers being much smaller and rarer bats, are enormous flocks of these two latter are situated on the roof of the animals and possess very sharp edges, which can easily penetrate the human skin. The teeth of the big vampire, on the other hand, are simply adapted for a diet of insects and fruit. The true blood-sucking bats are much rarer than the vampire.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The summer's awful heat will kill those not fit to resist it—those whose bodies are full of poison because they have neglected their bowels.

The victims of sunstroke, or of any of the other terrible dangers of summer—diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus—are always those who have been careless about keeping clean inside, and as a result have their blood full of rotten filth breeding disease germs and their bodies ready with weakness to succumb to the hot spell. Dizziness, heat headaches, sick stomachs, sticky oozing ill-smelling sweats, restless nights, terrible pains, gripes and cramps in the bowels, sudden death on the street, all result from this neglect.

FOUGHT GEN. GRANT.

A Wood County Man Who Had a Scrap with Former President.

Probably the only man who ever had a rough and tumble fight with Gen. U. S. Grant is an old resident of Wood county, Dan Rezin, a farmer in the town of Rudolph. Forty years ago a controversy arose between the two men which by mutual consent was settled on the banks of the Mississippi near Galena, Ill.

For some years before the Civil war broke out Dan Rezin was employed as a lumber driver on the Wisconsin river, piloting immense rafts of lumber from the saw mills near Rudolph to the large cities of the south, occasionally going as far as St. Louis. This was before the shriek of the locomotive was heard in Wood county, and the Wisconsin river was the only route by which products could be transported to market. It was a rough and precarious existence and only the men of unusual courage and hardihood engaged in it. The driver started out from the mill with his raft for a trip of several hundred miles, never leaving his charge for a moment until delivered over to the firm to which consigned. His business was to guide his course so as to evade all rocks, whirlpools and dangerous rapids. The men knew perfectly every mile of the river's course and when a long stretch of smooth water was encountered would lie down and snatch an hour or two of sleep, sometimes awaking to find the raft beached on an island amid stream.

In the late fifties Galena, Ill., was an important river point, enjoying more prominence than it does today. This was the terminus of many of Rezin's trips and here he made the acquaintance of the man who in later years became one of the world's greatest generals.

Grant was employed as clerk at $50 a month in the tannery at Galena, owned by his brothers Simpson and Orville. Being out of employment and having a wife and four children to support he was given the position at the request of his father. Here he set up housekeeping in a prudent way. His income did not meet his expenses. His brother caused his salary to $75. With this he did better and began to be more hopeful of a fair living. He was 33 years of age and had not yet developed the business faculty; had failed at St. Louis as a merchant and near that city as a farmer. He was better at telling stories than making bargains. The life of a teamster seemed to be the height of his ambition. This was the only occupation in which he distinguished himself above his fellows. He was very fond of horses and made long trips over almost impassable roads when many others failed. When asked once why his horses never got stalled, he replied, "because I never get stalled myself." Grant was a heavy, broad-shouldered man, giving to those who knew him not the slightest glimpse of any ability to be a great leader or in any way a marked man. His characteristics as then known to his neighbors would have led them to expect from him a fair livery-stable man rather than a military hero or a president of the republic. He was one of those who have become distinguished above their real merits by the circumstances which made the ladder on which they went up to fame. Had it not been for the war of the rebellion there is no probability that he would have attained the rank of an average man. But the breaking out of the war opened up a career for him which put him where he worked up to honor, to duty and to a great life.

Grant was very fond of wrestling and other sports. He had the reputation of being the best man for miles up or down the Mississippi at a rough and tumble fight. His meetings with lumber drivers were frequent, always coming on victorious where no other weapons were used than bare fists.

In the summer of 1860, Dan Rezin, guiding his raft of lumber into the mouth of the Fever river near Galena, encountered Grant in a flat boat. The channel being narrow at this point a dispute arose over the rights of the stream. After exchanging all the epithets for which river men are famous, it was decided to have it out on the bank, whether they repaired, several men who chanced to be in the neighborhood accompanying them to see the sport and make certain of fair play. Rezin was taller and weighed less than his stocky antagonist, but was descended from hardy Irish stock. In his thirtieth year, and a clever man with the gloves on in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match. Selecting a level green spot the men opened the struggle. It was a battle royal. At one stage it seemed as if Rezin would be pounded into insensibility and then Grant would be forced underneath to receive his share of punishment. For an hour the contest waged fast and furious, until both men were forced to relinquish from sheer exhaustion. They shook hands over the result and were good friends from that time forward.

Today Farmer Daniel Rezin is three score and ten years of age, possessed of all his faculties and going about his work with the suppleness of a man half his years. He is fond of story telling and of his long list there is none he likes better to repeat than his fight with the great American general, Ulysses S. Grant.—Marshfield News.

Switzerland wants to be annexed to the United States. Wonder if we will have to send over an army of 100,000 men and kill off all the present inhabitants in order to have "peace" with them?

Donald, the six-year-old son of J. W. Newark, met with a painful accident on Friday which resulted in the breaking of the large bone in his left leg. He was "rearing" on the fence with some playmates when the board broke and he was precipitated to the ground with the result above stated.

There are still several of the souvenir books of Grand Rapids left and they have been left at the different drug stores about town where they are being sold at $1.00 each. Some people think this is an exorbitant price, but when all have been sold the edition will not be paid for even then.

—It stands alone, it towers above. There's no other, its nature's wonder, a warning poultice to the heart of mankind. Such is Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents at Johnson & Hill Co.

W. H. Barnes, the confectioner and restaurant man, will soon remove his stock of goods into the west half of the Pomauville building and will occupy the whole of the same. This change is made necessary by the increasing trade of both Mr. Barnes and W. G. Scott who have occupied the east of the building jointly, and having more room to their advantage they will increase their stock of confectionery and jewelry to a large extent.

Daly Gets His Bicycle.

The long lost bicycle belonging to Daly, the druggist, has been returned to him through the efforts of Chief McGivern, of Stevens Point. About two months ago a young lady giving her name as Bertha Koch rented a bicycle of Mr. Daly and did not return the same when the time was up. A few days ago Miss Koch was in the city and the ever watchful eye of Daly spotted the young lady on her way to the Green Bay depot bound for Stevens Point. Daly immediately repaired to said depot and accused the said young lady as being the renter of said bicycle. She, of course, denied the charge, and Daly not being certain of his bird, did not detain her. Nothing daunting, however, Daly telephoned a description of the young lady to Chief McGivern, and he, by a little clever detective work, secured the bicycle and expressed it to Daly yesterday. Following the bicycle came a letter from McGivern stating that he had "cooped" the young lady on another charge and asking Daly if he wished to enter a charge against her. Daly sent word back that so long as he had recovered the stolen property he was satisfied.

Under what charge the young lady is being held by Chief McGivern we have been unable to learn.

Captain Brabazon

BY B. M. CROKER

A Military Romance of South Africa

Poor Miss Jane had felt her nephew's death acutely, more than anyone would have believed. The few days he had spent with her had entirely reinstated him in her good graces. She liked him for himself; he was gentler, more considerate, and more manly, than the old, troublesome Teddy; and he evoked a memory which endeared him to her especially, for he seemed to link old memories of the past to realities of the present. A memory, notably, of a smart young officer of light dragoons, whose presence she recalled by his soldierly figure, his clinking spurs and his off-hand manners and his handsome face. This officer's epistles, on large letter paper, written in faded ink, were treasured up, along with a miniature, in the most secret recesses of Miss Jane's bureau; also a lock of brown hair, the very same shade as "Teddy's." The smart young dragoon might have been a burly, stout, red-faced squire by this time, discussing short-cuts and rain-pipes, addicted to snubbing his wife, had he lived. But he had not; he had died, sober in hand, on a far-away Sikh battlefield, and a halo of romance and regret forever enshrined his memory.

Time works wonders. Who can stand against him? Esme has bowed to fate at last. She has even, in a way, become reconciled to Teddy's death. She can speak of it now quite calmly; for have not three months elapsed since the day of that fatal folly, and as yet no letter has come from Captain Brabazon, and she feels more drawn to him than ever now—for her dead brother is a bond between them. Did not Teddy die in Miles' arms, with him alone beside him? She makes every excuse that a feeble brain can contrive for his unlooked-for silence. How eagerly does she scan the mail news. How early she is down the morning the South African post is due, and she is always disappointed. Even without Mrs. Brabazon herself feels a little pang of remorse as, in answer to an unspoken appeal, she says, with a smile, "Nothing for you, my dear, this morning," and then there is another long week to get through; "but it will come, will surely come," she tells herself, bravely. There are so many things that may have happened. The mails have been lost, stolen or seized by the Boers. The camp may be now beyond postal communication. She reads with blanched cheeks of the battles. Miles was there; but Miles is safe, his name is not among the killed or wounded. Still he may be ill. And with thoughts and speculations of a more or less gloomy complexion does she torture herself through seven days more.

Then the house is full of a subdued, but busy, bustle, for Gussie is going to be married. It is to be a very quiet wedding, she tells everybody, apologetically, and "Fred is so anxious to be back for the honeymoon." The trousseau is magnificent, though many of the dresses are of a mourning type—the pretty laven-der and grays, and black and white tulle. The presents are numerous and costly, as has been previously stated. The wedding takes place without the smallest hitch in the program, one lovely September morning. There was no waiting bride, no missing bridegroom, this time. Mr. Vashon, looking very red, and very nervous, was waiting his extremely late-possessed little bride for fully a quarter of an hour. She came at last, escorted by Flo, and followed by Esme, who was nearly as white as her dress—Esme, who should have stood at that altar herself just one year ago. Her face was thin, haggard and woe-begone, her eyes had lost their brilliancy, and her lovely color had entirely faded from her cheeks. Truly people were beginning to whisper that the beautiful Miss Brabazon was now a positive wreck, and almost plain—being nothing more than a very thin, pale, dejected-looking girl. Augusta made a charming bride and beamed and smiled graciously on all her friends, as she walked down the aisle on the bridegroom's arm. She drove away from the church to Bedford, and traveled by the mail up to London. Mr. Vashon, who had a shrieking horror of being recognized as a bridegroom, indignantly rejected the couple which was tendered by an obsequious guard, and plunged, along with his Augusta, into a Pullman car full of other passengers. Alas, poor ostrich! little did your off-hand manner, or a newspaper, avail you. At the next station the beaming Miss Clipperton was in waiting, with an enormous white bridal bouquet. Gussie saw them eagerly searching the carriages, and shuddered, she closed her eyes, to shut out, if possible, what was coming. It was this: "Hatty Clipperton, smiling face at the window, saying, 'Oh, there you are, Mrs. Vashon. We brought you this bouquet with our best wishes. Be sure you send us a piece of cake.'"

Over Mr. Vashon's face and the faces of the other passengers, permit us to drop a kindly veil.

CHAPTER XX.

What does this picture convey to the mind of even the most obtuse in such matters? The scene before us represents a dull December afternoon, a leaden gray sky, brown hedges, bare trees and damp country lane. The only bit of color in the landscape is the scarlet coat of the young gentleman who, in splashy top-boots and leathers, is standing at the side of the road with his horse's bridle over his arm, while with the other he endeavors to seize the hand of a tall girl in black, whose face is turned away in an opposite direction.

Emboldened by a wedding in the family, Mr. Hepburn thought that surely he might now come forward and urge his suit, his courage permitting. He was very much in love, and had more than once been on the point of asking the all-important question, when his courage failed him; and all the way home subsequently, and until the next occasion when he met the object of his adoration, he would rate himself soundly for his cowardice, and pass valiant new resolutions "to do better next time." But Miss Esme was so unaffected, so ready to accept him as a friend, and she looked him in the face so frankly and yet so innocently with her dark blue eyes, that his tongue remained tied. This particular afternoon fate had favored him. He was returning from hunting when, in turning the corner of a road, he suddenly came upon a girl in mourning. Now was his time. Now or never! he said to himself impatiently, and trotting hastily forward before his courage had time to cool, he jumped off his horse and accosted her warmly.

"She looked, as she always did, pleased to see him, and questioned him eagerly about the run, about the people who were out; but he quickly cut short all her queries by an abrupt question of his own.

"Never mind the hunt now. I want to ask you something," he said, becoming exceedingly red and miserable looking. "And I'm sure if I know how to put it, you will tell me. I have been so much over at your place lately," bearing his boot with his hunting-crop as he spoke.

"Oh, yes," she replied, unhesitatingly. "Of course I do," her mind at once recurring to his friendship for Teddy, and his sympathy in their trouble. "Of course I know, and it has been very kind of you."

Mr. Hepburn stared at her in silence for nearly a minute, and then said, "I don't believe you understand what I mean; though I think you might have noticed it. I've been going to see you all along, and no one else. The more I see of you the more I like you. And—and my father and mother and I—want to know—if you will marry me. I'm not a bad fellow, and I'm awfully fond of you."

It was now Esme's turn to stare at him in blank amazement. "Don't talk to me in this way," she said impatiently. "You are making fun; you are not in earnest."

"I should think I was in earnest. And I hope you like me, even a little, Esme," venturing her name rather shyly.

"I do, I always did, as Teddy's friend, but now—now you have spoiled it all."

"Can't you like me as something more than a friend of Teddy's?" appealing to her with a wistful face, and endeavoring to possess himself of her hand.

"No, I can be nothing more than a friend to you always," she replied, ignoring his hand, and stepping back two paces, perceiving near the edge of a ditch.

"And why? Tell me the reason."

"You know the reason," she returned, now averting her face, which had borrowed its complexion from his scarlet coat. "You have heard," she proceeded, in a still lower voice, "of my cousin Miles?"

"Yes, but I don't mind a bit," very eagerly, and quite misunderstanding her meaning. "He treated you nicely. He was a confounded—"

"Stop, stop, before you say anything more," cried Esme, "and listen to what I have to tell you." And thereupon, with rapid, almost incoherent utterances, and faltering breathless sentences, she told the whole story of Teddy's secret and of Miles' mistake—a tale which the young man beside her heard with sinking heart and remarkable and various changes of countenance. When she brought her story to a close he put this one abrupt and crucial question:

"And you like him still?"

"Yes," in a very low voice.

"And would marry him after all?"

"Yes," in a whisper.

"Then there is no more to be said," giving his innocent horse an angry chuck to the bride. "Of course, if I had known I wouldn't have made such an awful fool of myself," turning away with ill-assumed dignity.

"You are angry with me," said Esme, tearfully. "And I don't know what I am to say to you," detaining him by a gesture. "If I had known or dreamed of this, of course I would have told you; but I never dreamed of it, and now I suppose, with trembling lips, 'you will hate me, and never be friends with me again.'"

Mr. Hepburn was very much cut up; but at the same time he had a soft heart, and to see a very pretty girl with large tears in her eyes, deploring the loss of his friendship, considerably cooled his indignation, and he hastened to assure her that when he had got over it a bit he would still be her friend. Of course it was a facer. But he was not such a dog in the manger as to grudge the other fellow what he could not have himself.

"I don't understand it, you know, not a bit," for Mrs. Brabazon told the matter that she never had cared a straw for him, nor for you. It was all a mere question of money, and you know, Esme, I can give you heaps of that. The governor said he'd let us start with five thousand a year. He is very much taken with you himself."

"I don't care for money," said the young lady, hastily. "Mrs. Brabazon was quite wrong. I was not going to marry Miles for money, nor he me, and I would be proud to marry him without a shilling."

"And live on love," suggested Mr. Hepburn, whose heart was still very sore indeed, and could not refrain from this one gibe.

Esme colored painfully, and was about to make some angry retort when he added:

"Forgive me. I cannot help it. I envy that Miles of yours. He is a lucky fellow. It's not every pretty girl in these days that says she doesn't care for thousands a year, and will take a chap without a penny. Well," with one foot now in the stirrup, holding out his hand, "good-by," winking her fingers in his hand, like a girl, "What can't be cured must be endured," taking off his hat to her as he uttered this truism; and in another moment he was trotting away down the road on his brown hunter, leaving Esme alone.

There are some things cannot be bid, especially from a lynx-eyed lady, such as Mrs. Brabazon. Mr. Hepburn's infatuation for her stepdaughter was one of them. She was alarmed about a week later to usually overhear at an afternoon tea that "young Hepburn had sent his hunters up to Tattersall's and was going abroad immediately, to Nice or Monte Carlo." What did it mean? Had he proposed or not? She must see Esme about it at once, and her mind was in a perfect ferment of impatience till she reached home and rang for Nokes to send Miss Brabazon to her in her own room as soon as possible. Esme was soon on the spot.

"Shut the door," said her stepmother the instant she appeared, "and come over here. I wish to speak to you. I want to ask you a question," she proceeded, looking fixedly at her stepdaughter. "I heard to-day that young Hepburn had suddenly sent all his hunters up to Tattersall's and gone abroad. Perhaps you know what it means? Can you tell me the reason of this unaccountable conduct?"

"I? I, Mrs. Brabazon?" stammered Esme, faintly. "Why should you ask me?"

"Come, come, this fencing is no use. The man was heard over ears in love with you. Is it possible that he has gone away without speaking?" she asked in a tone of resentful wonder.

To this she received no answer. Esme sat quite still, her eyes glued on one particular pattern in the carpet, and made no reply. However, she had become extremely and painfully red.

"He proposed to you, I see. And when?" demanded Mrs. Brabazon, authoritatively.

"Last week," returned Esme, in a low voice, not daring to raise her eyes.

"And what did you say, might I be permitted to ask?" proceeded Mrs. Brabazon in convulsive tones.

"I said—no," replied Esme, scarcely daring to speak above her breath.

"You said no," at once screamed her stepmother, now rising to her feet. "Said no to the heir to twenty-five thousand a year, to the finest overalls in England! Oh," casting her bonnet on the bed with such furious impetuosity that it rolled off it at the other side, "I can't believe it. You could not—not be so wicked. It is impossible."

To this harangue Esme made no reply, evidently she had been quite capable of this outrageous deed. After glaring at her down-faced companion for some seconds Mrs. Brabazon said hoarsely:

"I should like to know what you said to him, and why you refused him; in fact, I insist upon hearing your reasons," demanded the lady, with a lurid gaze.

Visions of her beautiful castle in the air, her stepdaughter's high position in the county, and her own increased importance, were now dispersing like mists before the sun.

"Your reason, miss, at once," with an imperious gesture.

"My reason was," returned Esme, tremulously, "was—because of Miles."

"Because of Miles? Forsooth, and a pretty reason! Do you mean to say you would hold to your engagement still, and marry him if he would have you, you idiot?"

"I would," rejoined the victim, firmly, raising her eyes now for the first time.

"And what would you say if Miles would not have anything to do with you? What would you say if you were told that, now the money was gone, Miles was not such a fool as to marry a girl without a penny? What would you say if Miles broke off the match?"

"I would simply say nothing, for I would not believe it," returned Esme, also rising, and casting a pale, pale reflection into a mirror in an opposite wardrobe.

"I suppose if you said in your own handwriting you would believe it. Seeing I am believing, will that convince you?" taking a letter from her desk and handing it to Esme.

And Schaefer Settled.

Wizard Jake Schaefer, the expert billiardist, is known as one of the greatest jokers in the business. Some time ago Mr. Schaefer was lounging in an up-town billiard room. Business was dull, but a pompous chap came in and asked the proprietor to get some one who was "pretty good" to play with him for an hour or two. The wink was "tipped" to the "wizard" and he was introduced, but purposely his name was mumbled so that the gentleman did not catch it. Mr. Schaefer and his new acquaintance commenced play, the latter graciously allowing the expert to choose the game. "Jake" won every game by a few points. The style of billiards was changed, but at straight rail, cushion caroms or balk-line the "wizard" invariably finished in the lead. Realizing that he had met a "pretty good player" the gentleman asked:

"Beg pardon, but I did not understand your name." "It's Schaefer," answered the "wizard." The other laughed. "Well, that's a good one; mine is Ives—Frank C. Ives." They kept on playing and the bill grew to goodly proportions. Then the pompous chap said he would play one more game and then quit. But before beginning the last game he excused himself for a moment, and as no particular attention was paid to his movements, the roomkeeper still has the bill on his slate as a reminder of the "little joke."

YOUNG LOVERS DROWN.

Life Savers at Kenosha Find the Bodies in Harbor Waters.

Kenosha, Wis., July 17.—[Special.]—The crew from the Kenosha lifesaving station shortly after 7 o'clock last evening took from the waters of the Kenosha harbor the lifeless bodies of Helma Beinhorn and William Burwell, two well-known young people of this city. The story of their death is shrouded in mystery. Yesterday morning the lifesavers found a woman's hat and a man's cap drifting in the waters of the harbor near the station, and in the afternoon they went in search of the bodies, which were found later in the evening. The finding of the bodies created a great sensation, and when they had been sent to the station in one of the rowing boats, a great crowd gathered and thronged the little room. The young people had been missing since Sunday evening and the finding of the bodies was the first clue to their whereabouts. No one seems to be able to offer any solution of the mystery of the sad death of the young people.

For some time Burwell has been keeping company with Miss Beinhorn, and he was seen with her last night. From the appearance of the bodies when found it was evident that the young man had made an effort to rescue the woman, as when the body of Burwell was pulled out of the lake he held the girl by the hand. The relatives of the young man and woman are prostrated with grief on account of their tragic death, but they can offer no solution for the mystery.

Both the young people had been employed at the same factory and a strong friendship had grown up between them. On Sunday evening they had started for a walk and they were seen walking along the dock near the schooner yacht Argo, which was in the harbor. There was a boat lying near the spot where the bodies were found and it is supposed that the woman attempted to get on the yacht and slipped and fell into the water and the boy jumped in to rescue her.

The girl was 16 years of age and the sister of Henry Beinhorn, the county assessor. Burwell was 19 years old and a general favorite. At the inquest held a verdict of accidental death by drowning was rendered by the coroner's jury.

Both Miss Beinhorn's parents are dead, but Burwell's mother is almost distracted by the event, and fears are entertained that she will lose her reason as a result.

OF CHINESE ORIGIN.

Arch Constructed in China Long Before It Appeared in Greece or Rome.

The Chinese structures that impress the engineering observer most strongly are the bridges, the pagodas, the city walls and certain details of building construction. The arch, that beautiful structure from the scientist as well as the aesthetic point of view, is generally believed to be of Roman origin. It was not known to, or at least never used by, the Greeks, and although the shape appears in certain specimens of Hindu architecture, it is of false variety—that is a succession of protruding corbels. In China, on the other hand, we find it of most widespread and general application, and examination shows that the principles involved are thoroughly understood.

Mineral use of the design in all parts of the country and the undoubted antiquity of so many of the existing examples clearly demonstrate that it long antedates any possible foreign suggestions, and go a long way to establish it as of Chinese origin—a department, however, like like printing and gunpowder, never passed beyond the national borders.—Engineering Magazine.

WAS NOT MURDERED.

Fight at Cottage Grove Dance Did Not Terminate Fatally.

Deerfield, Wis., July 17.—The report from Madison, Sunday, conveying the news that a Norwegian farmer was killed in a brawl at a dance at Cottage Grove Friday night, proves to be erroneous. The victim of the fight, Lars Baskager, is still alive. He is at his home near Cottage Grove, under the care of a doctor, and will probably recover. Sheriff Kanouse visited Cottage Grove and gave out that he would make a number of arrests. Four persons are said to be directly implicated. It is alleged that Baskager precipitated the fight.

Exciting Runaway.

The following was received by the editor and is published by request:

Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson, of Seneca, a newly wedded pair began their real life July twelfth, Thursday evening, after supper they went out driving. There were three rigs, the first contained Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jackson, the second Mr. Chas. Klevens and Miss Minnie Henke, and the third or last rig contained Miss Emma Dammert and Mr. Andrew Shrodle.

After being half way around their trip an accident happened, which took place just below Mr. Yonkskon's hill on the two corners which meet and belongs to Mr. Yonkon and Mr. Heiser. They came down the hill on a dead run then turned the corner up towards Mr. C. Heiser going around the corner the carriage tipped over the top and the wedded pair stand on the wire fence and the horse and four wheels started up the road on a more deadly run. The horse run up as far into the woods as it could and then they caught it. When they brought back the horse they loaded up their truck and changed their bugies. Mr. Jackson waved his hat and they looked as cheap as if the chickens had taken their bread away.

The old people will know better next time, than to let children drive themselves, next time they will send a driver with them. Instead of turning around the corner, they turned the corner around, they plowed the sod all up. There were peanuts and a cigar pretty well wrecked up and pieces of carriage scattered all over.

Coadjutor Bishop.

Bishop Grafton, of the Fond du Lac diocese, has asked for the appointment of a bishop coadjutor for the diocese. The standing committee has acceded to the Bishop's request, and will on the 30th day of August, hold a special election for that purpose. One reason why the announcement is important is the fact that the coadjutor will become bishop of the diocese on the death of Bishop Grafton.

The bishop announced that he would release his own salary that might be given to the coadjutor.

Bishop Grafton has issued an invitation to the clergy of the diocese to attend a retreat to be held at Grafton Hall, August 23 and 29. Bishop Grafton has presided over the diocese for eleven years and the increasing work, together with his advancing years, he being now seventy-one are the reasons assigned for taking this step.

Among the names suggested for the position are those of Rev. R. E. Weller, of Stevens Point, and Rev. B. Tabbot Rogers, of Fond du Lac. In the selection of a coadjutor bishop the standing committee could do no better than to choose the Rev. Father Weller and his many friends and followers in this city would be more than pleased to have him named for the position.

Is it Right for an Editor to Recommend Patient Medicines.

From Sylvan Valley News, Brevard, N. C.

It may be a question whether the editor of a newspaper has the right to recommend any of the various proprietary medicines which flood the market, yet as a preventive of suffering we feel it a duty to say good word for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. We have known and used this medicine in our family for twenty years and have always found it reliable. In many cases a dose of this remedy would save hours of suffering while a physician is awaited. We do not believe in depending implicitly on any medicine for a cure, but we do believe that if a bottle of Chamberlain's Diarrhoea Remedy were kept on hand and administered at the inception of an attack much suffering might be avoided and in many cases the presence of a physician would not be required. At least this has been our experience during the past twenty years. For sale by Johnson & Hill Co.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was Yellow Jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." In a recent letter from Bannell, the famous "southpaw," he stated that he will remain with the Aberdeen team until the first of August, after which he will rejoin the Minneapolis team. At the close of the baseball season Oscar will return to Madison, where he will take up the study of law.

Come Again.

A change has been made in the mail service to this city by which we will get our mail about twelve hours earlier from the south. This is a move in the right direction and will be appreciated by all.

This, however, applies only to the east side and mail addressed to the Centralia office is delayed just the same as before. Now, what wants to be done is for the business men's association to get together again and secure the same service for the west side.
